DINING A THOUSAND YEARS AGO.

The Food of the Anglo-Saxon Men of Wealth Was Served in Abundance.

A thousand years ago, when the dinner was ready to be served, the first thing brought into the great ball was a table Movable treaties were brought, on which were placed boards, and all were carried away again at the close of the meal. Upon tain was laid the tablecistle. There is an old Latin riddle of the eighth century, in which the table says: "I feed people with many kinds of food First, I am quadrupled, and adorned with handsome elathing; then I am rele had of my apparel and lose my legal

The bread was baked in round, that cakes, which the supersteller of the cook marked with a cross, to preserve them from the perils of the fire, Milk, butter and choose were also beaten. The principal meat was bacon, as the acorns of the oak forests, which then covered a large part of England, supported numer our droves of swine. Our Angle Saxon forefathers were not only hearty enters, but also deep drinkers.

The drinking horns were at first liter ally horns, and so must be immediately empted when tilled; later, when the primitive hern had been replaced by a glass cup it retained a tradition of its rude prodecessor in its shaps, so that it. too, had to be emptied at a Iraft. Each guest was furnished with a speen, while his knife he always carried in his belt; as for forks, who dreamed of them when on will see ader a correct with a basin. of water and a toxel always presented him ell to each coest, before dinner was ory of and after it was cooled.

Boarted ment was served or the gut or rollon which it was ended, and the guest out or tore off a piece to suit him self. Build meat was had on the cale s of bread, or later, on thick slices of bread called "tamehore," from a Norman word meaning "to cut," as there were to carre the meat on, time preserving the table cloth from the knife. At first the trencher was caten or thrown upon the tone floor for the degs who even had at their master's teet. At a later date it was put in a basket and given to the soor who gathered at the manor gate. During the latter part of the Middle Ages the most conspicuous object on the table was the salt cellar. This was generally of silver, in the form of a ship. It, other paper of its class. was placed in the center of the long table at which the household gathered. my lord and hely, their family and guests, being at one end and their retainers and servants at the other. This included 31 oxen, 100 pigs, 356 fowls, 29 hares, 50 rabbits, 9 pheasants, 56 patridges, 48 woodcock, 29 ployers and 3,000 eggs, Many of our favorite dishes have decended from the Middle Ages. Macaroons have served as dessert since the days of Chaceer. Our favorite winter breakfast, graddle cake, has come down to us from the faraway Britons of Wales, while the leas have lanched on gingerbread and girls on pickles and jellies since the time of Edward II., more than 500 years ago.

Uncle Jerry's Tip on Hogs and Corn.

Secretary Rusk, of the department of agriculture, says that farmers in all parts of the country are inquiring as to the probable profit of feeding corn to hogs at present prices. He desires to state that the prospect of large returns from about 9 pounds of hogs, live weight, to bring the prices of a bushel of corn. This year 5 pounds hogs bring as much as a bushel of corn. If 10 pounds of pork are made from a bushel of corn, which may be taken as a fair return, then the recent price of boos would make corn bring about 85c a bushel if fed to these animals, which is about twice as much as it is now quoted at on the Chicago market.

Here it is, and it fills the bill much better than anything we could say: "It gives me the greatest pleasure to write soari, mide on the 20th day of February, 1833, the understand, Public Administrator within and for Holt county, Nissourt, has taken charge of the settle, with will annexed, of Loussa Boltgreve, deceased.
